 - Literature/ bibliotherapy, done by VSA
 - Theater as a form of art therapy, done by IGA
 - Phototherapy, done by AMAKA
 - Storytelling, done by Antropos
3. The third activity was a short group work exercise, in which the institutions had to come up with ideas how such art therapy activities could be implemented in their everyday work.
4. After lunch, Intellectual Output 4 was presented to the participants, many of whom welcomed the fact that now there is also a complete training methodology which can be used to multiply and disseminate the project outputs.
5. As a short practical demonstration a theater scene was presented by Andrey Momchilov and a volunteer from the Center for social rehabilitation and integration of offenders in Pazardzhik.
6. As a next step, the current and upcoming activities were briefly described, including all relevant information on IO5, which is about to be finalized.
7. The event ended with feedback from participants and closing words by IGA's Unlocked project staff members.

Notable comments from participants:

Veselin Kotsev, Director of Pazardzhik prison explained that in fact phototherapy would be possible for implementation in prisons, as they have protocols for social activities that would allow use of cameras in secure environment and under guidance from social workers.

Adrian Nenchev from Pazardzhik prison turned out to be the only person from the participants, who has previous knowledge of storytelling and has been trained to use it in his work with prisoners.

Two residential social services suggested that if the next multiplier event is organized in the form of a training, they would be happy to try theater and phototherapy in their work with the juveniles.

Nikoleta Uzunova, Head of the Child Protection Department in Pazardzhik suggested that should phototherapy be undertaken by some social services or institutions and some artistic photographs are produced, a space for an "exhibition" would be provided in the building of the Complex for Social Services for Children and Families, where the Child Protection Department is located.
